

Declension/Conjugation Practice

1. You (sing.) walk into the water.
2. We are presenting a crown to the queen.
3. There were poets in the native land.
4. The sailors and the women desire money.
5. The queens are poets.
6. You (plural) are shouting about the island's queen.
7. They have concern about the woman's water.
8. There will be torches in the streets.

9. The crowds are choosing the queen of the island.

10. You (sing.) were a sailor, you (sing.) are now [nunc] a queen, and [et] you (sing.) will be a poet.

11. Poets desire fame, women desire money, and [et] the sailor shouts about the woman's torch.

12. They are on the island's paths.

13. I am crowning the queen's poet.

14. She desires the island's water, but [sed] they desire the poets' crowns.

15. You (plural) are walking on the country's road.

16. We are choosing the island's poet, but [sed] he shouts to the sailor about the woman's beauty.

17. We walk into the gate but [sed] you (plural) were poets.

18. There was beauty on the island, but [sed] there will be fame.

19. It is the queen's penalty to desire money.

20. We are choosing an island for the country's women.